THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1909.

The Jeopard proved himself to be a thoroughbred when it came to running.

TUESDAY was the first time it was ever known for county people to vote for town trustees.

JEFFERSONTOWN people know how to vote for a home man. Mr. L. C. Owings received the highest number of votes cast for any candidate in this precinct. He will make a splendid Legislator.

QUITE a stir was made when the voters of Jeffersontown precinct went to cast their ballots Tuesday, as the names of the candidates for town trustees were printed on the same ballot as those running for county offices. There was no word of telling whether a voter was a citizen of the town or not after he had voted, and it is said, a great many non-residents voted for trustees. It seems that a grave mistake was made upon the part of some one in having the ballots printed. It is likely that no election will be declared in the town, as it is known that many illegal ballots were cast. Separate ballots for town trustees should have been provided.

How the man of enterprise stands out in the world! You can't overlook him—you don't want to! He's worth noting—always. He's a lesson, an inspiration! He makes us sure of him—sure of what he will accomplish, of how much he will add to the zest of life in our environment! Of the merchant who is an enterprising advertiser we always feel a civic pride—an inclination to say to our acquaintance of a neighboring city: "Ah, but if you had a few merchants like Blank!" In every issue of this paper you'll find the ads of merchants whose enterprise is exhilarating—who make this town and Louisville the best places in which to live, and thrive, and find bargain. They make every issue of this paper worth money to every reader of it—including the present issue. That's enterprise—and it's fine, inspiring! Don't undervalue it—don't "take it for granted"—for it earns your appreciation, your enthusiasm.

THE people in general are thankful that the election is over. Some are disappointed because their choice did not win, but, nevertheless, they now experience great relief from the strain and turmoil. Candidates and newspapers on both sides engage in personalities and abuse to such an extent that honest men hesitate to take any interest in politics at all. Especially in Louisville the abuse among the newspapers was something abominable. The He was passed daily and such ridiculous reports published that the smallest child could readily see that they were false. Why reputable newspapers will engage in such combats their readers are at a loss to understand. For the past month the two afternoon papers in the city have been chockful of nothing but political "rot." The election is now over and we hope to see more news, and a strong effort on the part of all to bring about prosperity and advancement.

How to Live Long.

Men desire above all things to "live long in the land." And yet few men seem to realize that long life depends upon certain well-defined conditions, and that by meeting these conditions the term of life can be enormously lengthened.

As regards to longevity, heredity is, of course, a factor: but in this and many other respects, the influence of heredity has been greatly overrated. It often happens that a man of poor stock, of a sickly or short lived family, by taking proper care of himself, will live far beyond the proverbial "three score and ten" while another man of superb vital endowment will by careless or dissipated living so use up his stock of life power as to fill an early grave.

Reduced to the lowest terms the conditions of long life are two: a clean body and a clean mind. To gain the former one must eat lightly of simple food, must drink much pure water and must see to it that poison removing organs, skin, lungs, bowels and kidneys perform their duty fully. Calmness of mind is essential, because all excitement, particularly unpleasant excitement, anxiety, worry, anger and so on—all states react on the vital organs disturbing their action, thus depleting vitality and curtailing the life span.

Sick Room Suggestions.

The oldest bed linen in the house is required for the sick room. It is soft and comfortable for the invalid; if injured by disinfectants and boiling, or if destroyed in cases of contagion the loss is not great.

Old night gowns, handkerchiefs, towels and wash cloths should for the same reasons be discarded. When handkerchiefs must be burned—and this is frequently desirable—it is a good plan to buy cheesecloth and cut it into small squares. This material also makes splendid soft wash cloths for invalids' use.

The sick room supply of pillows must usually be increased, at least during convalescence. Pillows are needed to put under the knees when the patient begins to sit up in bed.

For a bed rest, for a convalescent, put a chair in the room with the legs toward the head, the back making a steamer chair shape, and cover it with pillows. It is obvious that, no matter what the disease, all bed linen must be carefully cleaned before it is returned to the rooms where it belongs.

A Prudent Business Man

Will examine closely into the character, reliability and financial responsibility of the company with whom he insures his property, just as he would investigate the standing and reputation of any other business concern with whom he has business dealings. Strong and reliable companies are necessary to protection, and is the only absolute assurance of prompt and complete settlement in case of loss, not to mention the feeling of protection in having your property covered by policies in companies whose reputation and soundness are unquestioned. Take out a policy in the Phenix Insurance Company and you will be assured of absolute protection from all loss. If you are interested communicate with J. C. Alcock, phone 36-3, Jeffersontown, Ky.

Pull Don't Push.

"If there is one business on earth that a quitter should leave alone it is advertising," says John Wanamaker. "To make a success of advertising one must be prepared to stick to it like a barnacle on a boat's bottom. Advertising doesn't jerk, it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but then it will steady. It is likened to a team of horses pulling a heavy load. A thousand and spasmic jerks will not budge the load, while half the power exerted in steady effort will start and keep moving."

Miss Mary Sweeney, the popular daughter of Mrs. E. P. Sweeney, our postmistress, is a close contender, and as both young ladies are working and for the delightful trip it looks as if Jefferson town will have the greater of furnishing the winner. Friends of the young ladies should get to work and help the one they like to win. The trip will be one of recreational value as well as one of most pleasant that was ever given. The party will be going about this time, visiting such places as Athens, Madeira, Gibraltar, Genoa, St. Monte Carlo, Rome and Naples (Napoli). The contest closes November 15, 1909. Of "Out-For-Fun" Club Got More Than They Bargained For—Didn't Go Home Till Morning.

The Out-For-Fun-Club, which was postponed October 16, on account of a projected meeting at Carrithers' Chapel, met Friday night, October 22, at the home of Mr. James Neel, of Louisville, and was delightfully entertained by Misses Ruby and Wallace. Quite a number were present and when at eleven o'clock a violent storm broke forth in all its fury, the young people made a rush for their homes and vehicles. It was some time before containing difficulties were overcome, but quiet was at length restored and all settled down once more to await the abatement of the storm. At two o'clock seven of the company decided to brave the elements of nature, which were still at war with each other and started for home, which they reached after some trying experiences. The rest of the company remained and as the hours advanced and the storm continued all joined in the sentiment of the song "We Won't Go Home Till Morning." A madman alluded to meet November 23, at the home of Jacob Boston.
